

RESTORING HOME STORYTELLING

HOME ASSIGNMENT

SUMMARY OF TODAY'S VIDEO

Talon and Alli Treb took notice one evening as their four little daughters sat mesmerized by a storyteller's tale. Talon decided to try it for himself. Bedtime stories have since become a tradition in the Treb home and in this interview we hear all about it in an enjoyable tale of how storytelling has endeared daughters to their dad in a very special way.

THIS WEEK

Follow Talon's example and try your hand at telling stories to your children. If inventing stories is not your strength....no problem! Tell your children true stories from your life. Start with stories from when you were about the same age as they are now. Keep them to 5 minutes or so to begin. They'll learn to love story time with you.

INSIDER TIP

Never tell children frightening or scary stories, especially younger kids. Kids are the best recorders, but terrible interpreters and keeping reality and make-believe separate is not always easy for them. Kids can actually be traumatized deeply by fear-filled stories. Better to fill their minds with positive and happy stories. There is enough fear in the world around them in their futures...no need to add extra. Be their hero and give them only the best and brightest tales of heroes, good deeds, beautiful scenes, helping hands, and godly characters.
